WEEK FIVE: FLANGE BINDING WITH A POP OF COLOR

It's the final week of the Bloomerang sew-along and you're now ready to put the finish on your beautiful quilt! Now that it's quilted, you'll trim up your project using the seam line of the border to make everything nice and square. Next up—binding! Learn how to create a lovely flanged binding for extra appeal. This two-toned binding goes on entirely by machine and adds an extra pop of color.

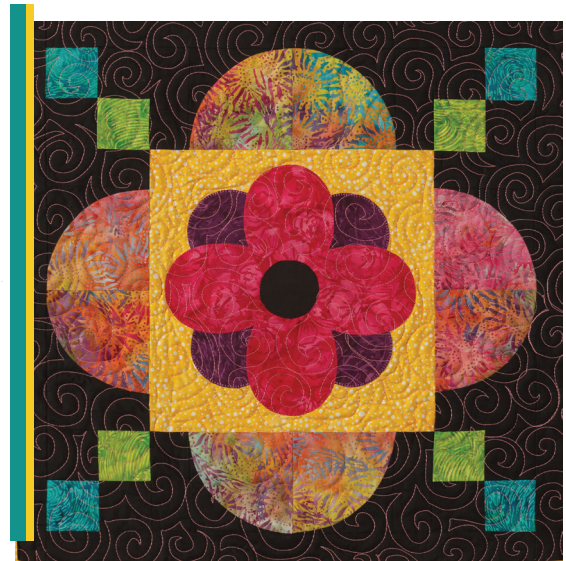

Remember that the tiny faux piping color is actually the wider strip of fabric and use the diagrams here to get your flanged binding ready to go. For lots of great tips, check out the full-length class, Create Better Bindings with Natalie Earnheart. To finish, you'll use the “plus sign method” to join the binding ends and stitch the binding to the back of your Bloomerang project. The last step is to flip the project over and stitch the binding down on the front side. Then Ta-Da, it's Ta-Done! Show us your finished Bloomerang!
